BOUDICA'S TREASURES

An icon of British folk law, few legends capture the imagination more than that of the Queen of the Iceni - Boudica. The myth and romance surrounding the original warrior queen has long been a topic of debate and speculation but now thanks to an exciting archaeological dig in Norfolk, her secrets are slowly being unearthed. With project director Dr Neil Faulkner as our guide, we journey back to a time when the Romans ruled the British Isles and the first rumblings of a Celtic uprising began. The dig has revealed some remarkable treasures - gold jewellery, pottery and coins are all helping in the quest to discover the real truth about Boudica.

THE ROMANS IN EUROPE AND PALESTINE

The Roman Empire was the first great empire in Europe. Though established by military conquest, the Empire's provinces were offered the benefits of Roman civilisation. Many conquered Europeans however, refused the offer - they preferred their freedom, their own way of life, and were willing to fight and die for them. None of the lands they conquered gave the Romans as much trouble as Palestine. Their head-on clash with its Jewish inhabitants was the stuff of great drama. For the Jews it ended in tragedy... For the Romans, it was a salutary lesson in how fiercely their dominance could be defied. The unique "Lost Treasures" series enables the ancient wonders of the world to be seen as never before...magically "restored" to their former glory by 3D graphics and presented in a superb animated vista. Our camera teams have travelled the world to gather spectacular new footage of ancient history's greatest monuments and their surroundings, providing a fascinating link between the past and the present day.

TROY MYTH OR REALITY?

How much is truth, how much myth, in the strange world, reminiscent of Middle Earth, which Homer created in the Iliad? What really happened more than three thousand years ago during the Trojan Wars? Did the beguilingly beautiful Helen of Troy actually live? Can she really have fallen in love with Paris, the son of the King of Troy, supposedly the most handsome man of his time? Could the people of Troy possibly have fallen for the trick of the great wooden horse? The story of the siege of Troy is an irresistible combination of myth and legend. But how much of this extraordinary story is spiced with fact? It is time to ask the question - what really happened... was Troy myth or reality?

THE CELTS

Long-buried treasures and newly discovered monuments have shed a new light on Celtic society. Classical writers condemned what they saw as a barbarian Celtic society - a lifestyle built around dark religious rituals, bloody sacrifices, feasting and savage fighting. However, as revealed in this informative and entertaining DVD, there also existed a rich and sophisticated element to Celtic culture.

EMPIRES OF THE AMERICAS

Following the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus in 1492, news of a "new world" filled with riches beyond any man's dreams rapidly intoxicated the imagination of explorers from far and wide. The arrival of conquistadors such as Cortez and Pizarro would eventually spell the end of two great ancient civilisations, the Aztecs and the Incas. Using magnificent computer animated graphics, the cities of Tenochtitlan and Machu Picchu come alive but just for long enough to appreciate the events which lead up to their violent destruction.
